Ben used scented markers (with hand-over-hand assistance) to help decorate the border of a collage about good-smelling things (on the left) and bad-smelling things (on the right). To help Ben determine which item should go on which side, a peer allowed Ben to smell and react to some of the items (an orange, a brownie, a rose, a piece of peppermint, sulfur, smelling salts) before placing pictures of them on the poster.

Ben was assigned a peer partner of choice for this small-group activity. He chose Zoe. Peers in his group cut out various pictures or aromatic things and held them up in Ben's field of vision. Peers asked, "Does this smell good?" and encouraged Ben to indicate "yes" by smiling and "no" by frowning or grimacing. Zoe labeled the columns with a marker and then helped Ben glue down each picture in the appropriate column.
