Tennessee Credit Unions Celebrate 100 Years

On Thursday, March 23, credit union history will reach an extraordinary milestone – marking 100 years since Governor Austin Peay signed the bill establishing state-chartered credit unions.

For the past century, Tennessee credit unions have remained a local, community-based, not-for-profit financial cooperative – owned and run by our members.

To commemorate the centennial anniversary, the Tennessee Credit Union League and credit unions across the state will host an array of festivities. We'd love for you to participate!

Centennial Celebration Reception

Wednesday, March 22, 5-7 p.m. CT

Credit Union House of Tennessee

444 James Robertson Parkway, Nashville

Join us on the evening of Wednesday, March 22, as we celebrate the centennial milestone with Tennessee legislators and credit union leaders!

We are excited to host the first of many events in the future site of The Credit Union House of Tennessee. The office is located less than half a mile from the Tennessee Capitol above Southeast Financial Credit Union's James Robertson Parkway Branch and has ample surface lot parking. Once completed, the space will further elevate our advocacy mission and allow us to host legislators and state agency officials. It will also be available for chapter, credit union and community meetings.
