Writing Style Guidelines

The Partners for Health team follows a consistent and appropriate style for print and online materials written for and about Partners for Health

It is important to note that the proper capitalization for the name Partners for Health when it appears in text does not include capitalizing the letters "TN", unless it is part of the logo or wordmark. Therefore, when using the name in written material, be sure to follow the correct capitalization guidelines in order to maintain consistency and accuracy.

Our organization adheres to the guidelines laid out in The Associated Press Stylebook and strives to maintain a 6-8th grade reading level according to Flesch-Kincaid Grade Level Formula. This ensures that any information we publish is both clear and concise.

Partners for Health requires all vendors and associates creating materials to use photos and graphics that are culturally sensitive, representative of the population, professional in appearance, design, and have approval from the state.

Use either Aachen or Open Sans Bold to evoke the brand voice in headlines and titles.

The Myriad Pro and Open Sans families are flexible with a wide range of weights, which is essential when creating text-heavy documents. Use either font family for body copy, captions, subheading, pull quotes or call outs.

Use either Myriad Pro or Open Sans, but DO NOT use a combination of the two in the same publication.

The type alignment should be left aligned.

For body copy a minimum of 10 point should be used at all times. This should be increased to 12 point for older people or people with visual impairments.

Avoid using all capitals format for long, continuous text.

Primary logo use

The full-color logo on a white background is the preferred usage.

The primary color logo should be used for all digital and color printing applications. Only the colors specified are allowed. Spot printing in Pantone colors is the preferred printing method. Use 4-color process printing when spot printing is not an option. The CMYK breakdowns do not preclude the important step of color proofing. For accurate color matching, refer to a current Pantone specifier.

Secondary logo use

When the logo is placed on one of our two brand colors, pantone 2757 or pantone 1797, use the corresponding reversed logo.

Limited logo use

The primary logo is always preferred. However, in cases where only a single color may be used on a non-branded background, use the corresponding reversed logo.

Minimum size

To ensure the logo is always recognizable and legible, it should never appear smaller than .25 inches in height.

The minimum size for print is .25 inches in height.

Clear space

Maintain at least the minimum clear space at all times. In order to maintain their graphic integrity, the Partner for Health logos should always have a clear area surrounding them—space free of any type or graphic elements. Leave a clear zone equal to "X" or greater, where "X" is equal to the height of the H in Health. When possible, leave even more clear space than the minimum indicated here.

Clear space (x) equals the height of the "H" in health.

Logo Don't

- Do not distort the shape of the logo
- Do not rearrange the colors of the logo
- Do not change the proportions of the logo
- Do not use the logo on busy backgrounds and backgrounds with insufficient contrast, which makes the logo difficult to stand out.
